UK Outlook for Sunday 29 Aug 2021 to Sunday 12 Sep 2021:
Through late August there is an increased chance of warmer than average conditions. This may bring the risk of thundery showers and longer spells of rain at times. Into early September confidence is very low but a northwest to southeast split is most likely. The northwest may experience more unsettled conditions and at times showers to longer spells of rain may spread southeast to other areas. Temperatures fluctuating around average. Any more prolonged and drier weather would be most likely in the southeast where there is a greater chance of warm spells.
